

ABSTRACT

A thirteen sided collapsible container in which wet and dry food can be distributed from fabricated with one die cut and scored piece of a non permeable coated paperboard which contains fluids without warping or leaking. This invention is intended to be packaged with foods such as microwave popcorn to serve as a disposable container to consume edible product from. The invention may also be utilized as a container for food to be consumed from in instances where packing space is limited, such as a backpack for camping or hiking.